

Family model further study

1. What do you remember?

What do you remember from the lesson? In the box / in your notebook, write ten words that you connect with the lesson. They can be nouns, adjectives, names, countries, verbs...anything you like, as long as they are connected to the lesson.

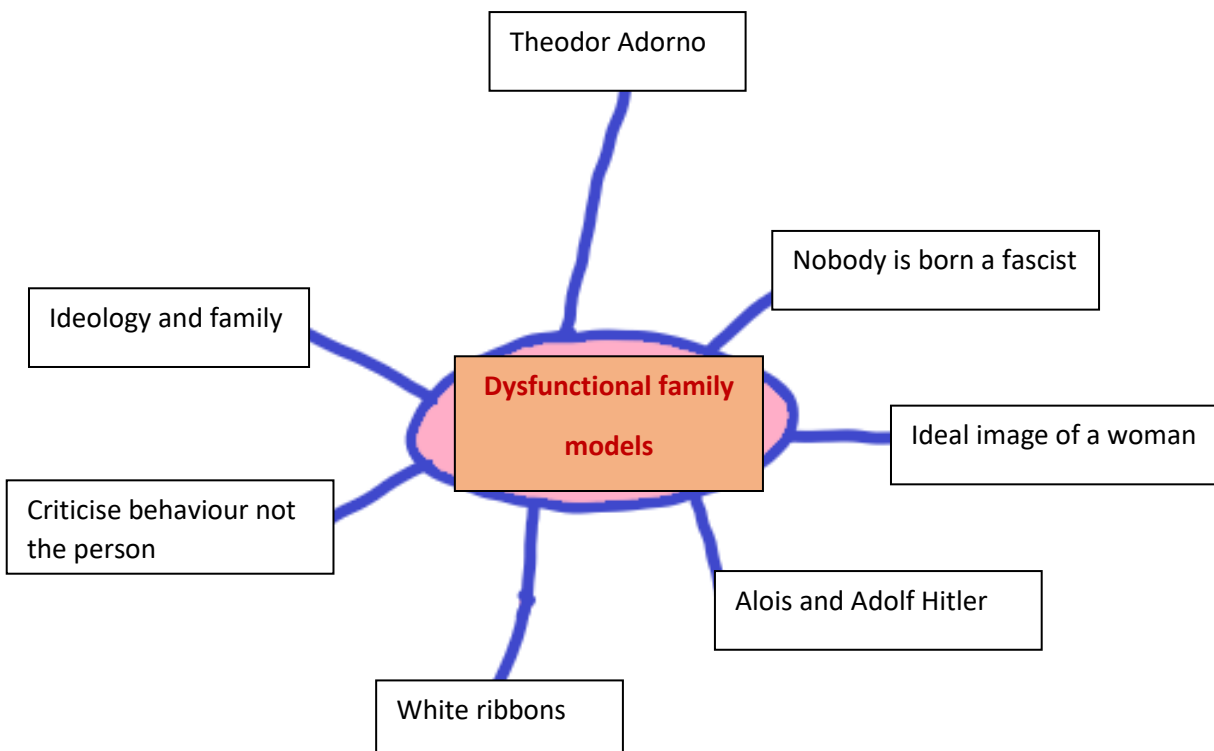

2. Before you watch the film

Before you watch the film, answer the three questions;

1. What is the title of the film?
2. Who is giving the lecture?
3. How long is the film?

3. Note taking

Watch the film. Note down the main ideas, names, themes in the film. An example is given here.

4. Writing task

Explain the main idea that comes to you from the film. Explain it in a way that an eight year old can understand. Here is an example. Use the notes from task 3 if you wish.

Different roles in the family.

Each member of the family has different roles. The roles are changing all the time. The roles are different in each country.

A parent's role is to shape a child who can live successfully in society.

A child's role is to do the things they are told. It is also to begin to think for themselves and not do things which they think are bad for them.

A grandparent's role, for example, is to pass on wisdom and knowledge to a child. The grandparent's wisdom and knowledge are different to that which parents give a child.

5. Links

The film may have stimulated your interest on the wider issue of family life, family models and how children can be raised in a way which makes them happy. Here are two links on the subject – one with a film to watch, and one with something to read.

6. Further investigation

You may wish to look further into the subjects, themes and name mentioned in the films. Google, YouTube and Wikipedia are three basic tools to make use of.

Try them with the following key words

average family size in different countries

Alois Hitler

medieval family life

Amish family life

great pedagogues

how to be a good child

Research is always better conducted when you have some idea of what you are looking for. Make a list of key words from the lesson and film and use them to conduct some online investigations of your own.
